75 YEARS OF VISION

Brilliant minds. Brilliant medicine. Giving meaning to your generosity.

A VISION REALIZED

It all began with an ophthalmologist who had a brilliant vision: to bring a world-class medical center to the city he loved. In 1919, Dr. Edward Cary, with the support of leading Dallas philanthropists like Karl Hoblitzelle, launched Southwestern Medical Foundation. In 1941, the Foundation established Southwestern Medical College and helped to nurture its growth from a fledgling medical school into one of the preeminent medical research and academic centers in the world. Today UT Southwestern medical center enjoys an international reputation for discovering the basis of disease through research, applying the discoveries to the clinical care of patients, and educating the next generation of healthcare professionals.

Karl Hoblitzelle

The Foundation chartered Southwestern Medical College in 1941, with funding contributed by Army physician Edward Hines, Jr., a leading hospital at Old Parkland.

Without the generosity of the people of this community UT Southwestern would not be one of the top rated medical schools in America.

Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison

You can't be a world-class city such as Dallas is today without a teaching hospital and a medical center of the quality that we have.

Harlan Crow

Sometimes I'm in the position of just dreaming about doing excellent research. Because of Southwestern Medical Foundation, it's been possible to actually achieve what I want to do.

THE LASTING GIFT OF SOUTHWESTERN MEDICAL FOUNDATION

Former Texas Governor
William P. Clements Jr. made a $100 million gift to Southwestern Medical Foundation
in June 2012 to aid in the transformational project.

Southwestern Medical Foundation has supported the ongoing construction of the state-of-the-art, $800 million William P. Clements Jr. University Hospital, which opens in late 2014. The new facility, designed around the needs of patients and their families, will be as innovative as the scientific discoveries the Center is known for around the world.

A BRILLIANT TRADITION CONTINUES

With the help of our generous community, Southwestern Medical Foundation continues to support research, education and healthcare for the people of North Texas and beyond. To learn how you can help, contact us.

It was the Foundation that stepped up and said, we've got to be a provider, a catalyst... We attract doctors that know that this Foundation will support their research in really breakthrough avenues, and it takes a city from one level to the next.

Michael S. Rawlings, Mayor

Ed Cary and Karl Hoblitzelle were really visionaries because they realized some 75 years ago that if Dallas were to be a great city it had to have a great medical center.

Nancy Halbreich

Barnraising occurs when a community actively decides to come to the same place at the same time to help achieve a specific goal. I am proud beyond measure in what we have accomplished together.

William T. "Bill" Solomon
